The diagram illustrates a geological cross-section of a subsurface structure. The layers are color-coded and contain various patterns representing different rock types or structural features. The top section shows a thin grey layer, followed by a thick blue layer with a complex internal structure. Below this is a pink layer, then a grey layer, a yellow layer, a light blue layer, a green layer, and finally a bottom grey layer. A scale bar is located on the right side of the diagram.

The text on the right side of the diagram is partially obscured and appears to be a list of labels or descriptions for the different layers and features. The visible text includes:
